Dear Michael,

In terms of Programme, I think we have already have very specific to offer: except Haag and Connes, all other major speakers (Jackiw, Isham, Wilson) have confirmed that they will come and talk (Of course, Weinberg still retains some room for himself, but this is mainly for getting more special treatment. Also, Peter has a second cast: If Weinberg really cannot come, he will ask Howard Georgi to talk on effective field theory sharing the fifth session with Polchinski). But of course, you and Jeremy are in a better position to make judgment about the feasibility of organizing the conference within 9 months. My view is this: (i) we have a quite solid programme already; (ii) On my part, I am not worrying about 4,000 pounds (one way or the other I will get it somewhere: either from NSF or Mellon Foundation, or from BU); (iii) postponing to 1998 will give us more time for Cambridge conference, but will squeeze the time for Peter's next conference, which he plans to organize in 1999. (Of course he can also postpone it for 2000, but I am not sure about his research agenda -- he is working on a big project on effective field theory and string -- and timing. Perhaps Trinity would not be very rigid on booking.

If the only problem with the conference is money, do you think when the financial situation becomes clearer, for example, within a couple of months, we still can have the conference in Sept. 1997?

I will discuss with you soon.

Best,

Tinayu
